BOAT RACE -A rowing race between the Admiral's barge and the first cutter of the Mobican, took place on Friday last. The boats rowed from the ship, outside around the spar buoy. They came in in good style, however, the race being won by the cutter.

FINED FOR CRUELTY TO ANIMALS. - On Saturday morning, last, a Portuguese sailor was brought before the Police Magistrate. charged with having cruelly maltreated a horse. It seems that on Thursday last, the man hired a horse of a native, agreeing to keep him for an hour; but in half an hour he returned, when the horse was found to have been so badly treated as to be ruined. The Magistrate fined the man $50 for his little ride; he did not, however, seem to appreclate the Judge's view of the case, and made his dissatisfaction known in the most | the unmeasured terms. So forcible were his the Armory on Monday evening. Owing to the stormy weather, the attendance was not as large as usual. The President, Mr. Tor bert, read a very able and interesting essay, in favor of protection for our home manufacturing industries. His arguments were forcible and well put. Short speeches were made by Mr. Young and Mr. Geo. Clark, on the general subject, illustrating the effect of protection. on prices, production and labor. The association adjourned, to meet again, by call of the President. The discussion of the expediency of a protective tariff and the dissemination of information, on this subject, is the object of the association.

Protection.

Mr. EDITOR: The public have been informed, through your-paper, of an association among our intelligent, prosperous and skilled artizans, who propose to petition the next Legislature for protective duties on such imported articles as can be manufactured

We here appeal to them, rather than to the public in general; and it is hoped that a re-consideration of this purpose will re-sult in the abandonment of such a petition. It is now an established fact that protective duties are not able to prevent the importation of taxed articles of comthe importation of taxed articles of com-merce, but invariably produce a rise in the prices of these and all other merchandise, by these enhanced prices, the protected man-ufacturer loses, in the increased prices of family supplies, what he gains in the en-hanced price of his labor. But this is the least of the evil. The whole community office from the increased cost of his and suffers from the increased cost of living, and the unskilled, poor laborers, (embracing the masses of the people,) are made still poorer by these protective daties.

We select an item, included in the list of

We select an item, included in the list of the proposed articles to pay higher duties, as a representative of all the others. We will suppose that a pair of custom-made Boots sells at $14, being a more durable article than the imported one, which sells at $12. Now, the imposition of a protective duty immedi-ately runs up the latter article to $14, and the former to $16. Who does not perceive that the community will be the loser thereby, unless they protect themselves by increasing that the community will be the loser thereby, unless they protect themselves by increasing the price of their labor, and their salaries, and also the prices of their imported articles on sale. To this they are driven by the extra duties on the necessary articles of daily use. This reacts upon the domestic manufacturer by increasing the cost of his living above what it was before his business was protected by legislation; and he, too, is me gainer thereby. But the poor are made still poorer by being anable to purchase the necessaries of life.

Again: As the prices of goods and labor Again: As the prices of goods and labor increase, in the same ratio the value of money depreciates, and this requires a proportionate increase in amount to meet the demands of the market. To obtain this, the demands of the market. To obtain this, the focunitry must sell an amount of its exports, which is all lost to the community, as it goes to supply a void created by a depreciation in the value of money, and the country is no richer than before, but a loser. This depreciation in the value of money will also create a necessity to increase the amount of taxes to supply the wants of the Government, on the increased cost of living in the country.

Again: As the prices of goods and labor increase. Analysis of Westminster, died yesterday, argued seventy-four years.

Bethel, on the premises now owned and occupied by J. L. Lewis, as a cooperage. The following year, they moved this branch over to their present location, into another wooden, though more commodious building, than the one they left. In 1855, their old branch store building, which they had rented to a Chinaman, was burned down, in the fire that destroyed the Varieties Theatre, the Police Station House, and other buildings in that neighborhood. This fire was a most threatening one, and was only stayed from a large spreading, by the fire-proof store of Mr. Dimond on the East, and the Government House on the makai or leeward side of it. In 1861 they built their present fire-proof store, with a main floor and basement containing an area of about 6000 feet, of store and storage room, and located there, their whole business. The present enlargement consists of extend ing the west wing to King St., giving 50 feet frontage, and covering the whole with another story, which gives about 4500 more square feet of additional room, and something more than 10,500 feet in all. The original building, was built of coral stone with a brick front, the coral exterior being finished with Portland cement, the addition is of black stone laid in lime, and will be cemented outside, to correspond with the former outside finish. The corners are laid. with blocks of concrete. A slate roof covers the building. The work has been done in a substantial and workman-like manner, by Mr. Osborne, who on this, as on other buildings, has proved his abilities as a master mechanic. Five weeks has sufficed to put up this addition, the business meanwhile, being kept on, with no more inconvenience than the litter and rubbish in the street, and the noise of the masons and carpenters. The original flat roof was not removed, until after the present roof had been finished.

Mr. Osborne, we understand, will immediately go on with the new Post Office building, that is to be erected, which will be made fire-proof, and will be another signtly
